1241	Satisfactory Academic Progress	 4.2 Administrative Capabilities Standards 8.4 Assessing Satisfactory Academic Progress Appendix G Provides additional information regarding assessing satisfactory academic progress (SAP). A school must assess SAP at the end of an increment that is no longer than half of the program's length, or one academic year, whichever is less. A school that elects to evaluate SAP after each payment period has more flexibility in Title IV funding options than a school that chooses to measure SAP less frequently. Also, states that a school's SAP policy must specify the pace at which a student must progress through his or her educational program to ensure that the student will complete the program within the maximum timeframe. Pace is calculated by dividing the total number of hours the student has successfully completed by the total number of hours the student has attempted. Remedial courses do not have to be included in the pace calculation. Provides regulatory definitions of terms applicable to SAP.
